Combining the literary heritage of Southern writers with international influences, The Baptism of Jeff Buckley and Other Stories represents one of the emerging voices of the New South. Contained in the book are three previously published short stories: The Baptism of Jeff Buckley is a fictionalized recounting of singer-songwriter Jeff Buckley's last performance at Barristers in Memphis, just before his untimely death. Babylon on the River, set in Little Rock, Arkansas, combines an examination of modern responses to grief with a medical mystery. In A Reckoning, Gibson Monk's first published work, a young man reflects on his uncle's life and murder during a hunting trip, and his own response to that violent act.
